In 2022, we held an online seminar by the heads of research institutes and managers of companies on such themes as "What doctoral graduates are expected to have for innovation and problem solving," and invited two prominent figures active in the world as lecturers. Many course students listened intently to the online seminar, and after the lecture, they actively asked questions and engaged in a lively exchange of opinions with the lecturers. Students commented, "I was very stimulated by what you taught me, which is very important for my future career path." The seminar ended in successfully.
